school (College of Propaganda) established by Pope Urban VIII for the education of priests for foreign missions.

Archaic . an organization or movement for the spreading of propaganda.

Here is a collection of images I found on the web that show famous prapaganda campains sponsorded by our "multi billion dollar trusted media".

No not CBS not "ONLY CBS" the news we can trust.

An image of Katie Couric, originally released in May by CBS, was slimmed down for reuse. The left photo is the official first-pic-of-Katie released by CBS. (TVNewser posted it in May.) The doctored photo on the right appears in the September issue of Watch magazine, which is owned by CBS, according to Mediabistro.com, which first reported on the alteration.

Reuters! Come on, no not Reuters.

August 2006: This photograph by Adnan Hajj, a Lebanese photographer, showed thick black smoke rising above buildings in the Lebanese capital after an Israeli air raid. The Reuters news agency initially published the photograph on its Web site, then withdrew it when it became evident that the original image had been manipulated to show more and darker smoke.

"Hajj has denied deliberately attempting to manipulate the image, saying that he was trying to remove dust marks and that he made mistakes due to the bad lighting conditions he was working under," said Moira Whittle, head of Reuters public relations. "This represents a serious breach of Reuters' standards and we shall not be accepting or using pictures taken by him."

Other photographs by Hajj were also determined to have been doctored.

No not CBS again!

December 2000: In this single frame of a live video broadcast, the CBS emblem was digitally inserted during the New Year's Eve broadcast to conceal the NBC emblem on display in the background. The technology used is the same as what's been widely employed during the broadcast of sporting events to display advertisements on billboards.

We support the troops!

Pictured here is a digital composite of a British soldier in Basra, gesturing to Iraqi civilians urging them to seek cover, that appeared in April 2003 on the front page of the Los Angeles Times shortly after the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq. Brian Walski, a staff photographer for the Los Angeles Times and a 30-year veteran of the news business, was fired after his editors discovered that he had combined two of his photographs to "improve" the composition.

Remmber this one?

Hippi Times and peace protest.

This digital composite of Sen. John Kerry and Jane Fonda sharing a stage at an antiwar rally emerged during the 2004 presidential primaries while Kerry campaigned for the Democratic nomination. The picture of Kerry was captured by photographer Ken Light as Kerry was preparing to give a speech at the Register for Peace Rally held in Mineola, N.Y., in June 1971. The picture of Jane Fonda was captured by Owen Franken as Fonda spoke at a political rally in Miami Beach, Fla., in August 1972.

We support the troops!

This March 2004 political ad for George W. Bush, prepared during his run for president, shows a sea of soldiers as a backdrop to a child holding a flag. This image was digitally doctored by copying and pasting, from the original photograph, several soldiers in order to digitally remove Bush from a podium. After acknowledging that the photo had been doctored, the Bush campaign said that the ad would be re-edited and reshipped to TV stations.

Go Go TV Guide and the mind control tool. This gose for the TV as well Oprah. Shoot your TV.

No No not Newsweek! NEWSWEEK?

The cover of TV Guide in August 1989 displayed this picture of daytime talk-show host Oprah Winfrey. This picture was created by splicing the head of Winfrey onto the body of actress Ann-Margret, taken from a 1979 publicity shot. The composite was created without permission of Winfrey or Ann-Margret, and was detected by Ann-Margret's fashion designer, who recognized the dress.

There's a good reason Martha Stewart looks slightly different here. The body belongs to a model. And Newsweek is not the only offender in this area. Texas Monthly once used a model's body with the head of one-time Gov. Ann Richards.

Did you mean this one?

OHH DAM! Time Magazine are you serious. Are there any trusted media outlets?

This digitally altered photograph of O.J. Simpson appeared on the June 1994 cover of Time magazine shortly after Simpson's arrest on murder charges. This photograph was manipulated from the original mug shot. A copy of the mug shot also appeared, unaltered, on the cover of Newsweek. Time magazine was subsequently accused of manipulating the photograph to make Simpson appear "darker" and "menacing."

Wow in 2002 nothing new under the sun.

The University of Wisconsin wanted a picture that reflected diversity at the campus back in 2000, so they put a 1994 photo of a black student, Diallo Shabazz, into a 1993 shot from a football game.

Shabazz is he related to Betty Shabazz? And "Check out the black power fists".

They have been playing this game a long time.

Leon Trotsky. Now you see him. Now you don't. After he ran afoul of the Communist Party, Trotsky was eliminated from photos where he mingled with other officials. In other manipulated photos, the Soviets painted in the gaps for added realism.

Now that smoking cause cancer. That propaganda campaign has ended.

"Goodnight Moon," and goodbye cigarette. If you have an older copy of the kids classic "Goodnight Moon," you'll notice something different between the photo of illustrator Clement Hurd on the dust jacket and the photo here. The cigarette is missing. HarperCollins eliminated it. Now, it looks like Hurd is trying to get someone to repay him 20 bucks.

Okay now here you go look at this image before you read my quick observation.

Now that you know what you know. I found this photo a few days ago. CNN and the United Nations use this photo to say. "Look at these coons! These ungrateful blacks. All the UN wants is to give them help and protection. And all they want to do is riot" Now look at this picture closely. Dose it match? Why is the girl running and laughing? Did she light the tires on fire? If she, did how? And look at the man in the back did he light the tires on fire? I guess he needed the fire to set up the barbecue he is preparing for. And wait is that a jug of fresh clean water his is holding? Is not this riot over water? And what about the man in the red shirt he seems mighty calm while a fire is raging behind him. And isn't it HOT? I mean dam who wants to be this close to burning tires, that stuff is hella toxic. Or this could be a doctored image to in-sight propaganda. NO they wouldn't do that. They never did that before. We have an honorable upstanding media.
